About Us

Ross/Woodward Classical Studies Magnet School (RWCSMS), an inter-district magnet school in urban New Haven, Connecticut educates students from New Haven and surrounding towns in prekindergarten through eighth grade. RWCSMS boasts a teacher created curriculum shaped in the classical liberal arts tradition and infused with the global perspective that is relevant to our students today. Great works and great thinkers from different cultures and different traditions are touchstones for thematic units of study. A rigorous curriculum coupled with child-centered Paideia principles and practices, have established a culture where children think critically and actively construct knowledge about the past in order to be innovative problem solvers of the future.

- Paideia Principles

Children need to have a voice and be the creators and senders of knowledge, as well as the receivers. Our teaching methods are rooted in higher-order questioning, critical thinking, active discourse, personal goal setting and self- reflection.

- Classical Thematic Studies

Knowledge and skills are developed through semester-long thematic studies. The themes are woven throughout the content areas and are explored from multiple perspectives and through various lenses.

Our Mission

Ross/Woodward Classical Studies Magnet School places an emphasis on the classical tradition of educating the whole child. We encourage an appreciation for the universal principals of truth, justice, honesty, and respect. We support a rigorous classical curriculum through which students engage in studies of great works over time. In pursuit of excellence, Ross/Woodward focuses learning on that which is timeless and of lasting significance.

Our Vision

We provide various forums for students to explore great works through a critical lens in order to become analytic thinkers who participate in substantive conversations to build connections between the past, the present, and the world of tomorrow.

Classical Studies Curriculum

We present the broad-based study of the liberal arts and sciences rather than a specialized focus on one content area or discipline. All children enjoy a balanced core-curriculum made up of reading, writing, mathematics, science, social studies, music, art, and physical education. Knowledge and skills are of equal importance and are gained through interdisciplinary thematic units of study. We aim for students to grow their understanding of universal ideas and values through Socratic Seminar. Through in-depth, thematic studies students link the past to the present and draw connections between great thinkers, important events, and revolutionary innovations. Ultimately, we aim to help our students discover the relevance of a classical education in one's preparation for the future.

Paideia Practices

In the past, logic and rhetoric were often taught by the Socratic Method; the teacher raised questions and the students discussed them. Our modern link to this classical model is Paideia, a network of schools grounded in the belief of relevant, active learning for all students. The cornerstones of Paideia Schools are Socratic Seminar and Coached Projects

Seminar: Paideia emphasizes Socratic seminar, or group dialogue to build understanding of selected texts and the ideas and values within them. Seminar is a collaborative, intellectual dialogue centered around one text. Seminars are facilitated by teachers who use higher-order thinking and open-ended, text-based questioning to drive the discussion. In seminar, students develop both intellectual and social skills. Students work to reach understanding of a text; simultaneously they work to strengthen their listening and speaking skills. We aim to foster active thinking through engaging dialogue.

Coached Projects: Intellectual coaching is the central instructional technique for teaching and learning in Paideia schools. Teachers coach students in order to meet individual needs and achieve personal growth for all students. Each semester students at Ross/Woodward produce a coached project as a component of their thematic study. The process of acquiring knowledge and developing skills is as important to us as the resulting products and performances. Coached projects provide an opportunity for children to apply the experiences, knowledge and skills they have acquired and showcase them in a creative, personal manner for an authentic audience.

Positive Behavior Intervention and Support

Ross/Woodward promotes positive behavior and decision making through four tenants, referred to schoolwide as The Explorer's Way:

- Be Kind
- Be Courteous
- Always Do Your Best
- Ask for Help

Students are rewarded for following this school wide initiative. We recognize students for their positive behavior at monthly Fun Fridays and through The HEART Hero of the Month, as well. We believe that promoting positive behavior reduces incidents of negative behavior and puts the focus on teaching and learning in a safe and orderly environment for all members of our school community.

Personal Responsible Behavior for Parents

Modeling personal responsible behavior is one of the most important jobs for any parent.

Some positive examples you can set for your child:

- Be willing to hear all sides of a story. Coming to a conclusion before you have all the information can lead to misunderstanding.
- Demonstrate respect for your child's teacher by discussing matters in a calm, courteous manner. Remember your child is listening at all times.
- Consistently monitor and encourage your child to reach his/her full potential socially and academically. Acknowledge and praise their efforts.
- Help your child take responsibility for his/her mistakes.
- Remember, you are your child's first role model.
- We value your input and feelings, however, please understand that if you show up at school unannounced without making previous arrangements with the individual you wish to speak with, you may be asked to wait or make an appointment. We are working with your children to ensure high quality instruction at all times during the day. With that in mind, we want to give you the appropriate time and attention you deserve to fully understand and address your concerns.
- Please allow all staff members 24 hours to return your phone calls before leaving another message.
- Every student is required to have a current emergency information form on file in the main office. It is vital that we have several phone numbers on file in case of an emergency. Please remember to contact the office if you change your contact information. Students will not be allowed to participate in out of school programs if we do not have updated contact information. We will be able to contact any person on this sheet. If a person is not listed, they will not be able to pick up the student.
